ROSEBERY'S PLAN TO SAVE HOUSE OF LORDS

LONDON, April 22.—British peers are gradually making up their minds in favor of reform, but there is no great personal enthusiasm. A dispirited house of commons member blamed his lordships for causing a patient on his road to his dentist's chair, determined to have the operation over, but reluctant to push the electric bell at the door of the man with the pliers.

The situation still centers round the hereditary principle. With the modification of this principle, the most important stage in the campaign will besuccefully passed and so far there has hardly been a peer who has uncompromisingly opposed modification, although many have expressed hesita-tance. It is curious that, considering the weakness now shown in the Liberal attention, the situation still centers round the hereditary principle. With the modifi-
